

Serving Over 280 Villages and Communities Throughout Alaska

With a storage capacity of over 16 million barrels, Crowley is strongly positioned as a leader in the Alaskan fuel industry, providing transportation, distribution, and sales of petroleum products.

The company utilizes a comprehensive fleet of trucks and vessels to meet the unique challenges of selling and distributing fuels throughout Alaska. Strategically located fuel terminals and a large truck and barge fleet enable Crowley to provide fuels and supplies to a geographically diverse customer base. The geography ranges from the highways of interior and south central Alaska, to 33,000 miles of Alaska's coastline, an area that includes the Arctic Ocean, Pacific Ocean, Bering Sea and the many rivers systems such as the Yukon and Kuskokwim.

Along the highway, Crowley provides storage, sales and delivery of fuels. Gasoline, diesel, heating fuel, AvGas, jet fuel, propane and lube are distributed to commercial and residential customers through seven highway branch offices. Distribution is provided via trucks, terminals and retail card-lock service stations.

On the water, Crowley uses a mix of offshore and shallow-draft vessels to meet marine distribution requirements to the remote locations of Alaska. Line haul barges transport the product from refineries to the terminals and shallow draft vessels to ensure a year-round supply for coastal and inland river communities. The company utilizes combination freight/fuel barges to ship cargo for customers to remote locations across the state. Crowley also owns and operates 14 tank farms and marine terminals along the coast and rivers of Alaska.

Since 1953, Crowley has consistently filled a vital need for fuel sales and distribution to the people and businesses of Alaska. Proving that no season is too rough and no location too remote, Crowley provides unique year-round solutions to over 280 villages and communities. And, it's a good thing, because we're also your neighbors in many of those areas. Check out our locations and give us a call today at one of the numbers on the back.
