

Utilizing Nature's Corridors to Deliver Your Freight

For centuries, many Alaskans have entrusted their livelihood to the river systems and coastlines of the great state. Crowley joined the tradition over 50 years ago and continues to utilize the waterways as a means of transporting freight to those remote villages, mining and construction sites and coastal and river communities throughout Alaska.

From assisting the government in the 1950's with the delivery of equipment and materials for the DEW line to deliveries in support of the Trans-Alaska pipeline in the 1970's and 80's, Crowley has been a partner with the people and businesses of Alaska. Today, Crowley continues with freight delivery and can arrange for the shipment of heavy oversized cargo including machinery, building materials and vehicles or any other general cargo from one of our 21 marine/fuel terminal hubs inland to remote coastal and river locations. We utilize combination deck/bulk petroleum lighterage barges to deliver direct to docks or make beach landings on the coast or upriver when the ice recedes.

By serving the Yukon, Noatak, Kobuk, Nushagak, Kvichak, and Kuskokwim river systems, the tradition of remote coastal and river cargo transportation continues. And by trusting Crowley with your cargo, you aren't just trusting a cargo company, you are trusting a neighbor and a partner. We respect the great land and people of Alaska and look forward to supporting you for many years to come.
