

Our equipment is incredibly foolproof, practically tamperproof and clearly proof of our commitment.

Our dedication to providing you with the most up-to-date, secure equipment is a reflection of our commitment to your entire supply chain.

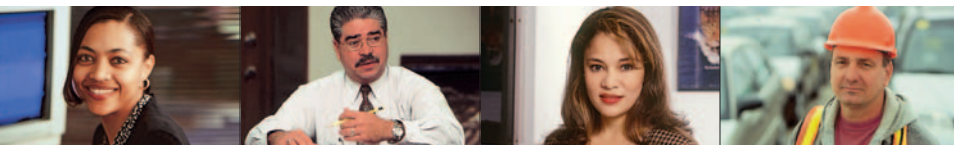

It's pretty evident that we're committed to our customers who ship between the U.S. and Central America. Over the past few years, we've invested in thousands of pieces of new equipment, including 45', 102"-wide dry containers with chassis, high-cube garment-on-hanger (GOH) containers and other specialty pieces designed to accommodate oversized cargo. But that's not all. To keep your cargo extra safe, we added three security features on our 45' dry containers. There's an area for an extra bolt-type seal to lock each door to its frame, 3/8" thick heavy-duty door plating at the top and bottom and tamper-resistant round-headed huck bolts on all door-mounted hardware.

Now that you know Crowley keeps your cargo safe and secure, we'd like to fill you in on how we get it to its destination safely and on time. Crowley is one of the few carriers fully validated by U.S. Customs in the C-TPAT security program, which means your cargo will always receive clearance as quickly as possible. It's just one more facet of Crowley's Speed to Market, the most efficient, reliable supply chain service between the U.S. and Central America. Besides proximity to market, we offer frequent and dependable sailings, inland transportation capabilities and tons of other logistics services. With Speed to Market, it's no wonder Crowley's the leader in ocean shipping for the apparel industry.

People who know Crowley know that our equipment is strong, and our people, systems and customer service are even stronger. To put this secure equipment and the dedicated Crowley team to work for you, just give us a call at 1-800-CROWLEY or visit www.crowley.com.
