

Crowley. The one company where protecting your cargo comes naturally.

Our ability to quickly embrace the latest security measures has made us the industry leader.

Protecting cargo has been a top priority of ours since day one. We were original partners with U.S. Customs in the elite Super Carrier Initiative Agreement, which protects against the smuggling of contraband products, drugs and stowaways. We were the first ocean carrier to sign up for the Customs-Trade Partnership Against Terrorism (C-TPAT), and are now fully validated by U.S. Customs and Border Protection, a designation held by fewer than 10% of C-TPAT registered companies.

Our port facilities throughout the U.S., Latin America and the Caribbean are fully lighted, fenced, guarded with manned security patrols, and monitored by cameras. Plus, whether it's coming or going, we run cargo through multiple security checks.

Our new container equipment is even more secure. It features unique construction and extra anti-intrusion rear door security elements. Over the road, we use truckers with GPS systems and we've installed cargo-tracking systems with some of our containers to keep a closer eye on shipments.

Our commitment to security is one way Crowley provides customers with increased Speed To Market. The more secure the supply chain, the faster your cargo gets cleared and the faster it reaches its final destination.
